The mission of St. Louis Christian College is spelled out very simply in the college catalog: "The college is devoted to the two-fold task ordained by Christ in the Great Commission—the work of Christian evangelism and Christian education. Not very complicated, is it? Yet, these twin focuses—actually one, because teaching is tied to evangelism—make a tremendous difference between an education at a Christian college and one with secular perspectives. You see, at SLCC, there is no such thing as a "purposeless" class, activity, event, or even school rule, for everything is oriented towards spiritual formation so that students may "disciple the nations."

St. Louis Christian College is a "single-purpose institution," a Bible college, not a multifaceted university; but this one purpose surely holds a "world together."

—Dr. Robert C. Kurka, Professor of New Testament and Theology
